

If you or your spouse or partner needs their own room

I/my partner requires their own bedroom because of the needs of my/their disability.

Explain here all or some of the following:

- Why does the person need their own room?
- What are their health problems?
- What is the room used for in relation to their disability?
- What would happen if the person could not have their own room?
- What would the effect on their health be, or the health of other family members/carers if they could not have the extra room?

To ignore my needs/the needs of this person and treating me/them as not being entitled to my/their own room to sleep in is discriminatory and unlawful in relation to the Human Rights Act 1998.
